In Hyde Park. This famous park of 300 acres, named from the manor of Hyde, and once an appanage of Westminster Abbey, was first planted as a park by Henry VIII. Here Queen Elizabeth hunted, here Charles II. held horse races, and within its confines many duels have been fought. To-day it is a favourite rendezvous for rich and poor alike, and is famous for its political demonstrations.

The key arrived safely, thanks for same. Will you tell your sister that I had only one wheat-ornament brought me this year, but if it is of any use, she can have it, perhaps the dog would like it. I will leave it at the Mansion in case she sends. - Sw.
